Light persons narrowly escaped death from a kerosene explosion on the pleasure yacht Junius Lee, on Monday night, about nine miles off Montauk Point, Long Island Sound. The passengers were O. B. Jerrold, of Arizona, his wife, three children, servant, and two seamen. Jerrold, while passing through the cabin at midnight, was thrown against the centre table by the lurching of the yacht, upset the kerosene lamp, which exploded and set fire to the vessel. The youngest child with the nurse sank with the yacht, but the others were saved.
